

bedroom. The fire place being in the centre of the room — on a disused millstone ^{usually} centrally, the fuel heat, the smoke of which escaped through a gable end shaped creel in the roof. Divided from the "Chamber" by a partition, was the ~~corridor~~ the last apartment — a cow house — and greatly larger than any of the others. . . . The dwellings of the great majority of Farksonen, — were precisely similar, & yet left nothing to desire. Before 1731