POLICE STORIES from P3

My Police Story

One day when I was off school I went to Inverness with mum, my Nana and Paul. We saw a robber smashing a window in a house across from a Spar shop. Paul saw a phone box and we stopped and dialled 999 for the police. Then we went to the police station and the police went to the house but the robber was not there. They found fingerprints at the house. I do not know if they caught the robber.

MY POLICE STORY

One day at school P.C. McEwan came. He showed us a video.It was about strangers. There was a boy in it and a dog.The dog told a story about a boy and a stranger. The stranger offered the boy a sweet but the boy didn't take it. He ran home and told his dad and mum. His dad went to the police station. A police man came to the house and asked some questions. After that he told the policeman what happened and the policeman wrote it down in his note book. After the video P.C. McEwan asked us some questions about it.

MY POLICE STORY

On Thinking Day we went to the police station with the rainbow guides and P.C. McEwan locked us in the cell. He said I have not got the keys. He said to one of the leaders to look around the door for the keys. The leader said no it was not there. P.C. McEwan was pulling our legs Then he let us out of the cell and we went to see how to make finger prints. We saw footprints as well. After that we went to see the police radio. Then we went to the West Church Hall.

SUNSET POEMS from class VI

Dusky Horizon

Looking at the dusky horizon,
The lake glittering here and there,
The dark black shadows are difficult to see.
But the dusky horizon is looking at me
Its colours are bright,
And as clear as can be
As the golden horizon beams behind the darkening clouds,
As time goes by
The mountains get darker
The sky gets redder,
The misty evening passes on
Until nightfall comes.

By Annette.

Sunset Poem

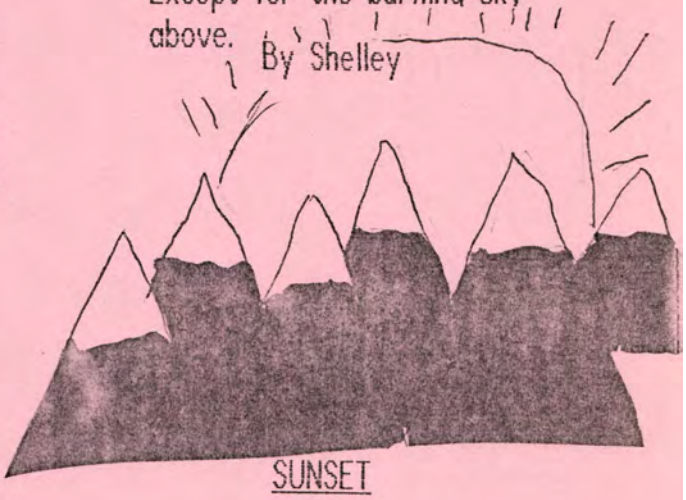
I look into the sky at the dusky horizon,
The sun going down through the clouds,
Staring over the holy island,
Shining over the beach.
As I lie there still and silent,
Looking up at the sky,
Almost all the colours of the rainbow,
Glowing down like a diamond in the sky.
Everyone can see a sunset,
Shining down on their houses.
If you walk along a beach,
stop and see,
How beautiful a sunset can be.

By Kate McCarthy

SUNSET.

The sun shines down,
And fills the air,
With orange and gold,
Burning the top of the church,
While the trees,
Just want to flop over,
With the sun and heat,
Everything turns into a shadow,
Except for the burning sky above.

By Shelley



SUNSET

Everything is still,
In the little town.
Not a word to be spoken,
Not a sound to be heard,
As the sun falls slowly.
The sky is filled with red and yellow,
And a tinge of gold.

The sky grows darker
every minute.
The moon begins to shine
On the little town.
One minute a busy street.
Next, it is like a ghost town.
If you look seawards you
Will see the water glittering
On the dusky horizon
As the sun falls.

ANIMAL MAGIC

from P.7.

MY CHINCHILLA'S ADVENTURE

It all began one afternoon last August when my mum and dad went to Tain in our Renault 25 GTX. My brother was away in Aberdeen so I had to look after his pet chinchillas. They're a cross between rabbit and squirrel. They're also very expensive, about '70 each and very rare. In fact we are the first people in Scotland to breed them. The same day but in the evening my family went to the Academy because of the induction of our new mininster. After we set the food up, a girl saw a rabbit under our car. It turned out to be a chinchilla. In fact the chinchilla had gone all the way to Tain and back. We had to take the whole wheel off. Norman MacDonald the police inspector was there. Finally I managed to get it out of the wheel hub. We fed it and held it in the car till we got home. That night, I watched Friday Sportscene. The following Friday we got The Northern Times. In the Seen and Heard was my mum's name. It was spelt wrong because they thought she was a male but I can't remember the exact words.

What did Santa say to his wife before she went out? Don't go out in the rain, dear.

Why a Zebra has Stripes

A long time ago in Africa there was a beautiful white horse. Each night he would put on his black and white striped pyjamas and in the morning he took them off.

One morning while he was eating his breakfast a small voice said,

"Don't eat that circle of grass because it is a fairy ring."

The horse was startled. He looked down and there before him was a tiny fairy.

"Oh please Mr Horse please don't eat our ring," the fairy pleaded.

"Ha,Ha,Ha, I can eat what ever I like," said the horse.

"Oh please don't or my queen will have to cast a spell on you," said the fairy doing her best to reason with him.

The horse took no notice of her and ate the fairy ring and walked away.

That night he put on his pyjamas and went to sleep.

In the morning he had such a shock! He couldn't get his pyjamas off so he sat down and cried. How he wished he hadn't eaten the fairy ring! He cried and cried until he had no tears left.

One day a cave man saw him and called him zebra meaning stripes

So that is how a zebra got his stripes.
